To The Teacher

Welcome to the Internet! There are only a few lessons but they are full of information. They are meant to provide the student (and maybe you) with a basic knowledge of:

1. How to get connected to the Internet
2. Some common kinds of ‘glitches’ or problems that you will run into
3. Spam, Viruses and Worms
4. How to download images and music or audio files

These lessons were meant to be used by the student or you working independently. Some suggestions:

1. The lessons are independent of each other so you can start with any lesson you want. I suggest that you follow the order that they are in on the start page because they follow a logical sequence:
   a. That of getting Internet Service
   b. Learning about the problems and how to solve them
   c. What dangers there are and how to solve them and then
   d. How to do some really fun things on the Internet
2. Please review the lessons before you give them to your students.
3. Please do all of the exercises to see HOW they are done, so that you know what problems the students may find and have ready solutions.
4. The lessons are not only in the reading. The soul of the lessons is in the activities.
5. Please make a note of those lessons or parts of lessons that have problems so that corrections can be made.
6. Some lessons may be a little difficult or include some activities that the students (or you) find hard. Please remember that everything is hard the FIRST TIME. (You didn’t ride your bicycle perfectly the first time, did you?) ☺
7. Have fun! These lessons are meant not only to teach, but to be an adventure! Go, explore, and come back wiser (smarter?).

Thank you in advance for your help in evaluating these lessons!
