Renaissance Christian Humanist vs. Macheavellian

- God in control of everything and has plan for everything and everyone
- everything works toward perfect essence
- everyone else strives to world towards perfection
- metaphorical language (sun, lion, king, on same levels)
- chain of being
- learn moral truths from history
- appearance is reality
- divine right of kings
- Gaunt (God will punish Richard II, no revenge needed)
- Richard II and beginning of the play Richard II ("Earth speech" God would fight for him)

- no overarching plan
- don’t rely on God
- rely on own sense of power
- use reason language
- do things for own gain of power
- understand Renaissance Christian Humanists but don’t except beliefs and use understanding to wards own benefit
- York (turns own son in)
- Richard II at end of the play Richard II (taking Gaunt’s land for his own benefit)
- Henry IV (killed Richard II, for his own benefit of becoming king)

Sarah De Haan
Eng 250